LEADERSHIP SEMINAR SERIES SYNOPSIS

This leadership Seminar Series is designed to provide insights about developing and sustaining personal and organizational leadership ability and capacity from top management through the frontline. Success in today's world is challenging and the rules are changing. We can be assured of several things: the challenges facing us today will become even more intense, the speed of change will increase and competition will be more intense.

To lead oneself and create an organization that will maintain a competitive advantage many leaders will have to transform a culture that was founded on yesterday's paradigms and ideas. Priorities will shift and thinking will have to change. Attitudes and behaviors reflecting new and different social and organizational values will have to be adapted. For many people learning to adjust and to change will be difficult and managing change will present even greater challenges. Personal and organizational success will depend on leadership that is focused on positive results.

EP's belief is that once you are aware of the scope, difficulty, risks and benefits associated with undertaking or not undertaking leadership development you will be better informed decide about taking the next leadership development step.
